NB It should be stressed that this list comprises countries and institutions which have supplied statements to CIE so far. This is an ongoing process and this list is constantly updated. Please be aware that individual departments within universities retain autonomy as to whether or not to admit students on the basis of the qualifications and grades they have achieved. Qualifications and grades required may vary from course to course and from university to university. This is the same regardless of which qualification is being considered.

Introduction

A Level

The General Certificate of Education (Advanced Level), or A Level, is the 'gold standard' of CIE qualifications. A Levels are one of the most recognised qualifications around the world. They are accepted as proof of academic ability for entry into universities, institutes of higher education and military schools and they are equally important for young people moving into employment.

A Levels have exactly the same value in admitting students to all universities as their UK equivalent. They are also accepted as entry qualifications by universities of the European Union, on a par with the French Baccalaureate, the German Abitur, etc. Good A Level grades can be a key to admission for all the world's major anglophone universities. University course credit and advanced standing is often available in countries such as the USA and Canada where entrance to university takes place after only 12 years of education. Good grades in carefully chosen A Level subjects can result in up to one full year of credit.

AS Level

The General Certificate of Education (Advanced Subsidiary Level), or AS Level, was introduced in 2000. It represents the first half of an A Level course but may also be taken as a free-standing qualification.

AS Levels are accepted in all UK universities and carry half the weighting of an A Level. For example, students may be admitted with suitable grades in two A Levels and two AS Levels (in place of 3 A Levels). Details of the tariff operated by the UK Universities and Colleges Admission Service, are given on the UCAS website.

Institutions outside the UK which offer credit for A Levels can be expected to offer half that amount of credit for AS Levels.

AICE Diploma

The Advanced International Certificate of Education (AICE) was first introduced in 1996 as a broader-based alternative to A Levels. AICE is a Diploma which is awarded to students passing enough A and AS level examinations to earn six credits in subjects chosen from three groups: mathematics and science, arts and humanities, and languages. AS level passes count for one credit while A level passes count for two. Therefore AICE students obtain credit equivalent to passes in at least three A Levels.
